VISUAL COMMUNICATION SPECIALIZATION

OBJECTIVE

The Visual Communication Course curriculum develops a visual and verbal vocabulary by examining relationships between form and content, word and image as an ideal formula for marketable, upwardly-mobile, and entry-level designers. The objective of the four year BFA Specialization Course is to provide the training essential for the conveyance of ideas and concepts basically associated with two dimensional images.

Exposure uses drawing, illustration, composition, photography, video, traditional 2D/3D animation, film editing and interface design for interactive CD-ROMs using the basic tools for the exploration of design. It is with this exposure; avenues for specialized animation, toy/game design, and digital design are opened.

The Course would seek to cultivate in the candidate an individual personality and profession at responsibility and confidence to face challenges that would arise from the fact that the noticeable changes in today's visual communication that has changed its nature and looks from paper to high speed internet as compared to the past. Exercises in creative writing, copy-writing and screenplay writing are also emphasized.

Visual Communication candidates will gain an understanding of the process of visual communication through Course work and Class projects covering a variety of print and design projects. Inter-disciplinary studies in arts and humanity are combined with intense studies in arts and humanity are combined with intense studies in visual forms, design history in Theory, concept and image generation through studio work and digital methods. Emphasis will be upon the candidate's expression, both on the practical and technical level from his/ her exposure to the objectives.
